

Bible Tails Too

The Biblical Adventures of Holy Moley and Harriet, Jr. Edition

Holy Moley opened his door and yelped in fright. A strange metal object was floating on his doorstep. Looking down Holy saw that the monster seemed to have green legs and fur.

“Is that you Harriet?” Holy Moley asked. His small friend tipped her head back and smiled. She had something like a cross between a hat and an umbrella strapped to her head. It was shiny, like silver metal.

“I’m ready for Pentecost.” echoed Harriet’s voice from inside the metal contraption.

“By wearing an umbrella on your head?” asked a confused Holy Moley.

“Well on Pentecost it rained fire, didn’t it?” demanded Harriet.

“Yes, but it wasn’t exactly like rain from a cloud,” explained Holy. “I think that was just a way of describing the power of the Holy Spirit, when He came to the world. I think maybe it was more like a wind.”

“Then the Bible story would say a wind.” said Harriet stubbornly.

“Ok, ok,” Holy said patiently, and he reached out to tap the metal hat. “Let’s say you’re right and it did rain. Why is your umbrella made of metal?”

“You think a regular umbrella would keep out fire?” Harriet gaped at Holy. “It would burn up!”

“Ahhh,” said her friend. “Then I have just one more question.”

“What’s that?” Harriet looked smug.

“If it’s God, the Holy Spirit raining down, why would you want to keep Him out?” Holy crossed his arms and looked smug.

Harriet stopped in her tracks. She pulled the metal hat off her head and started running back down the road.

“Harriet, hey, Harriet!” Holy called after her. “Where are you going?”

“To find a bucket!!” Harriet yelled as she dashed down the path. “If the Holy Spirit comes pouring down from the sky, I want to catch as much of Him as I can.”

“Wait for me!” Holy yelled back and ran after his friend. “I want a bucket too!”

And the two friends pelted down the street toward Harriet’s house.

A-MAZE-ING

Harriet is off to Jerusalem to see the Holy Spirit come down on Pentecost. Can you help?

Spot for dots

Some people said the Holy Spirit looked like fire. Connect the dots to see what other people said the Holy Spirit looked like. Do you know what kind of bird it is?

ALPHA-SPOTS

Connect the dots to make a letter. All together the letters spell a word from today's lesson.

On Pentecost people said the Holy Spirit looked like....

